This story was originally published in Day One, a weekly literary journal dedicated to short fiction and poetry from emerging writers.

While Father Paul McConnell was a boy, God would visit him in his tree house. However, the visits stopped twenty years ago, and now Paul feels increasingly lonely. Hoping to relieve his sense of alienation and reconnect with his convictions, he trades his comfortable post as a Jesuit academic for a humbler position at a local parish. But the senior priest there resents his intrusions, and Paul feels no closer to God than he had before.

When Paul meets Julia at a grocery store, he quickly recognizes her as a fellow searcher. Soon their relationship starts to move beyond confessor and penitent, and Paul begins to imagine a different kind of life. As he questions the boundaries of his calling, he'll have to face all that his monastic life has lacked—and whether he can recover his faith enough to make up for it.
